

Kate Woods

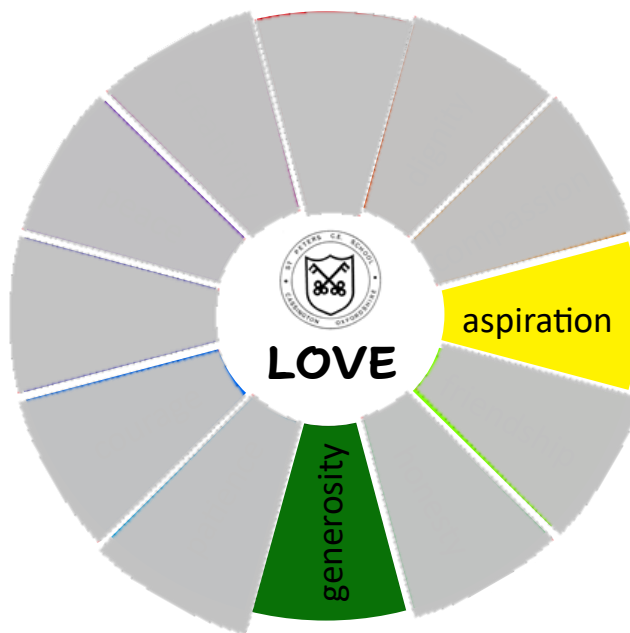

Kate works for a charity called Tearfund who help people who are living in poverty. They currently reach people in 53 countries. Tearfund helps people in different ways which include being creative in farming so crops are protected and helping people clean water so they don't get ill. Tearfund also helps with re-building houses after extreme weather. Over 20% of the global population don't have their own family toilet and that might mean they have to share a village toilet which could involve a walk of 5-10 kilometres. Kate was inspired to work with Tearfund from a young age because her mum and dad sponsored a toilet when she was young, and she remembers the toilet twinning sign on their bathroom door. When she was 20, she went to Brazil and worked with children in an orphanage. She always wanted to work with Tearfund because she wants to help other people. Kate's job involves telling people about the things that they could do to help communities build toilet facilities.
