

ANNE LUTTMAN-JOHNSON

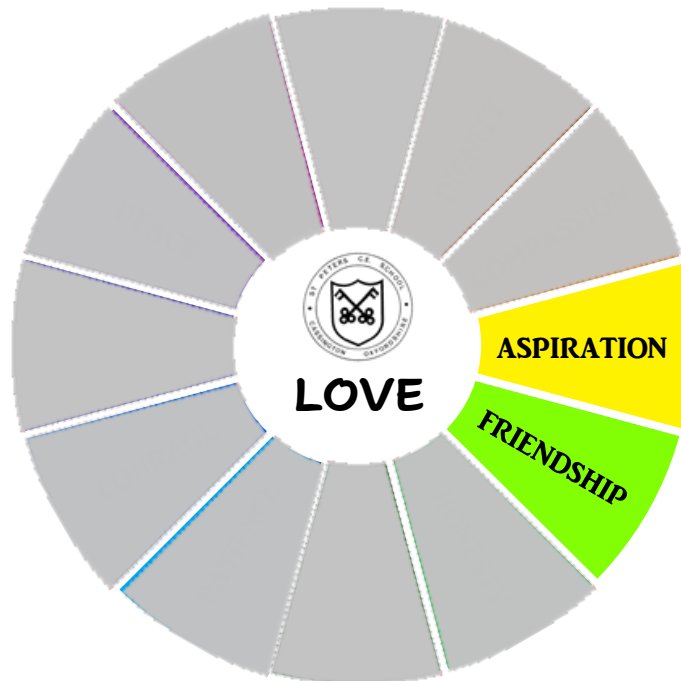

Anne spoke to us about her life after she had a bad car accident when she was 21 and broke her back which damaged nerves in her spinal cord. This meant she could no longer walk and now uses a wheelchair. She did not let this stop her, however! She studied Law and worked as an expert witness which gave support to people who have suffered injuries similar to herself. Anne's passion is sailing where she has been on some epic adventures.

ASPIRATION

We think Anne shows huge aspiration because she never lets her disability get the better of her, and she always wanted to do the best she could.

FRIENDSHIP

Anne said that friendship was the most important thing to her because it's her friends who are always there and help keep her going.

We all need friends so look after the ones you've got!
